

URIU WITNESSES THE DEDICATION

Great Bronze Doors at Naval Academy Swing for First Time.

GIFT OF COLONEL THOMPSON

Japanese Admiral Was Classmate of Donor, Graduating in 1868.

ANNAPOLIS, MD., June 5.—Wednesday, the second day of June week at the Naval Academy, was in many ways a notable one.

The feature of the afternoon was the dedication of the magnificent bronze doors of the new chapel, presented by Colonel Robert M. Thompson, of New York, an alumnus of the Naval Academy in the class of 1868, and designed by Miss Evelyn Beatrice Longman, of New York.

Admiral Sotokichi Uriu, of the Japanese Navy, was the guest of the occasion at the special invitation of Colonel Thompson and the superintendent, as was Colonel Hugh L. Scott, United States Army, superintendent of the Military Academy. Besides Colonel Thompson, the members of the class of 1868 who were present were Admirals Royal R. Ingersoll, Albion V. Wadsworth, Richard Walworth, John M. Hawley, Thomas H. Stevens, Gottfried Blockinger, Perry Garst, Arthur B. Speyers and Nathan E. Miles, Captain Charles A. Adams and Lieutenant John C. Irvine, retired.

The dedicatory exercises were begun with prayer by Chaplain H. H. Clark. The speech of presentation was made by Colonel Thompson.

Following Colonel Thompson's speech Master Thompson was led up the steps and proceeded to lower the flag that covered the portals. As he did so the Naval Academy Band played "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," while the spectators cheered.

At the request of Colonel Thompson Admiral Ingersoll swung wide the doors, and the members of the class of 1868 present were the first to file through them. Rear Admiral Richard Walworth, a former superintendent of the Naval Academy, delivered the speech of acceptance in behalf of the class.

Superintendent Badger accepted the doors in the name of the institution. The doors are the work of Miss Evelyn B. Longman, of New York, the designer, artist and sculptor, and are handsomely wrought.

BANK FOR PHENIX.

State Institution Already Organized for New Town.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) FAIRMVILLE, VA., June 5.—A State bank has been organized for the new town of Phenix, in Charlotte county. This thriving little place, which has sprung into existence within the last twelve months, is situated seven miles from Charlotte Courthouse, on the line of the Virginia Railway. The officers of the new bank are as follows: President, G. W. Berkeley; Vice-President, R. S. Chamberlayne; Directors—W. D. Rice, R. L. Snell, John W. Long, W. Peak, J. H. Price, Lee Paul, A. E. Fears, J. E. Johnston, G. W. Berkeley, C. P. Marshall and R. S. Chamberlayne. Work on the bank building will be commenced next week, and the institution will be ready to open its doors for patronage in time for the fall business.

New Wheat Reaches Market. (Special to The Times-Dispatch.) AUSTIN, TEX., June 5.—The first car of new wheat of the season in the United States was received at New Braunfels, fifty miles south of here, yesterday. It graded strictly No. 2.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Policeman Must Answer for Killing of Negro.

WINSTON-SALEM, N. C., June 5.—The coroner's investigation into the killing of the negro, W. W. Freeman, yesterday by Policeman N. B. Williams was concluded late this afternoon. The jury finds that the killing was not accidental, but that the fatal shot was fired by Williams while in a difficulty with the negro; that Freeman had a pistol in his hand at the time he was shot, and that he was attempting to shoot the officer. The jury finds further that Williams was not blameless entirely. The defendant was held for the grand jury, his bond being fixed at $5,000, which he gave.

Gossip Gathered at the Capital

By RED BUCK.

"How long, O Congressman, will this tariff debate be continued?" one of the oldest members of the House was asked.

"It depends on the weather," was the reply.

"Yes, if it rains in hot and keeps getting hotter until Washington is almost as hot as Hades—as Washington is in July and August—then Congress will adjourn. So long as we have beautiful days, with cooling winds, and refreshing showers the boys will stay in the city and the Congressmen will stay in the city."

The dear people—the constituents of the Congressmen—may not believe this story, but there is an element of truth in it. The tariff legislation is very important, but the health and comfort of the average Congressman is more so. If none of the good lawmakers were killed by a sunstroke there would be nobody to take his place. The 47,500 and extras would remain untouched in the office of the sergeant at arms.

July 15 is the time set for adjournment by the common outlook. Aldrich, the leader of the Senate, still insinuates that he will bring the tariff through before this month has passed. The discussion in the Senate has become tiresome. After the first roll call, when the state of the body was ascertained, interest in the progress of the bill began to wane. It was plain that the Finance Committee would do whatever amendments it saw fit. Mr. Aldrich has the votes and votes count more with him than the talking and he acts. Up to this time he has had his way, and from this day on he will have it. With all his faults the Rhode Island man has his virtues. He is the hardest and most persistent worker in Congress. While others sleep or play, he labors. At the age of seventy years old he is yet active, alert and painstaking. He never lets an opportunity to gain ground pass. As a general he has few superiors in this day and time. Every hour of his day is devoted to the work in hand. He studies men and the clock, and makes every count. The elevator men in the Senate office building say that Mr. Aldrich is "queer." That is because he does not ride with the state of the body, but in the good old way. This serves to give an idea of this masterful legislator's temperament. He prefers to keep going to waiting on the elevator. Judge D. A. DeArmond, of Missouri, is in the same category, so far as the elevator goes. He climbs the four flights of steps to his room several times a day.

Billie Lorimer, the new Senator from Illinois, is one of the most interesting characters in Washington. He was born in Manchester, England, about forty-five years ago. On coming to the United States he settled in Chicago, where he was employed as street car conductor. His ability to handle men was soon recognized by the politicians of the great Windy City, and he was elected precinct leader. Step by step he climbed the ladder of success, until now he is the political boss of Chicago. In appearance he is a grinning looking, illa large head is covered with long, thick, sandy hair, and his face has a dour, dubious look. He would not be picked out of a crowd for a leader, but that is just what he has proven himself.

His country, he is, is freckled in other ways. He has never taken a drink, never gambled, and never been known to go to a saloon. He would be called bad by the pure in heart of the present generation. He attends church and plays politics. As a contractor he has made money. At first politics was a pastime with him, but now it is a business.

His and Roger Sullivan, the Democratic leader of Chicago, work together. The scalp of Senator Hopkins hangs at Lorimer's belt. He knows the man well and that Lorimer did not start out to succeed but to defeat Hopkins, whom he was instrumental in putting in six years ago. One of Lorimer's mottoes is: "I will get the man who proves false to me," and that, it is said, is what has charged against Hopkins in connection with the nomination of Deneen, whom Lorimer fought last year. Revenge, sweet revenge, was his game, and he got it. Lorimer works quietly, like a cat, and stalks his quarry. In the House he made many friends by his simple, easy-going way. No brass bands accompany him in his campaigns. If he has ever profited by graft no one here charges it. His ability seems to lie in his superb control of men.

No Democratic Senator regrets the exchange of Hopkins for Lorimer, for the former was a bitter partisan, a caustic tongue. Tillman and Hopkins were always at war.

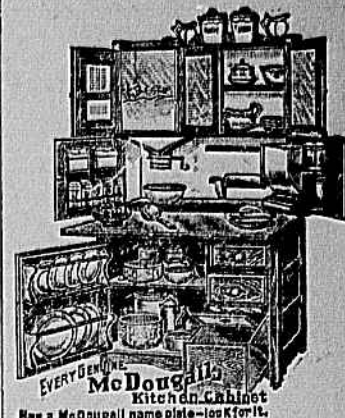

The Bailey-Manning fight has brought down upon the head of the Texas paper Mr. Bailey is either loved or hated. His great ability commands respect from every one, but there are many who denounce him in their hearts.

There was a time when a majority of the Washington correspondents almost worshiped him, but it is a rare thing nowadays to find a friend who will defend him against the attacks that certain papers make on him. He would do whatever amendments it saw fit. Mr. Aldrich has the votes and votes count more with him than the talking and he acts. Up to this time he has had his way, and from this day on he will have it. With all his faults the Rhode Island man has his virtues. He is the hardest and most persistent worker in Congress. temptation to throw his lunch hooks around the neck of an offensive fellow.

Manning lost an umbrella in the mix-up, but the boys in the gallery bought him another one and Wyatt Allen, of South Carolina, gave him a cone.

The Hon. D. A. Hollingsworth, of Ohio, has put himself in a hole. He offered a resolution protesting against the placing of the portrait of Jefferson Davis on the silver service of the battleship Mississippi, and a number of hot-blooded Southern editors literally took the bark off of him with fiery editorials. In rising to a question of personal privilege, he said: "The Hon. D. A. Hollingsworth read and had spread upon the records the unsavory things said about him. Among other items, this was exhibited: 'politically prejudiced gasbag from Ohio can no more cast a reflection upon the life and character of Jefferson Davis than a many-legged dog could upon the life of a man.'"

There were many and warm rebukes to the Ohio man, who bears the simple distinction of having the longest monstache in Congress, and the House laughed as he read them. But when the roasts were safely filed for the Record, Speaker Cannon said: "The gentleman has not presented a question of personal privilege," and Hollingsworth had to retire without having an opportunity to make any sort of reply to his critics.

In order to give further circulation to his remarks, the old fellow, "Hog" as he is called, invited a native of the South to the gallery, and the word of Southerners is to be taken, is sending out what he had inserted in the record.

Representative Grant, of North Carolina, is a mountain Republican of the cornbread type. In arriving in Washington he looked the city over to see if he could find a boarding-house where meat was cooked into its various products. To his great disappointment nothing of the kind was on the menu. Not to be outdone, he sent back to the Old North State and got a supply of water-ground meal, and turned over to a native of the Blue Ridge and had her prepare a feast at her home on Capitol Hill, to which the Tarheel newspaper men were invited. Corn pone, corn dodgers, corn cake and corn meal eggs, bread, with tomatoes, beans, onions on the side and buttermilk by the gallon were served in the good old way. Colonel Grant has made his way in Washington, and will be hard to beat. During the campaign he drank out of a gourd, and during the session of Congress he eats corn bread, a la North Carolina. He has not forgot his home raising. There are no airs about him.

John H. Redwood, Jr., of this city, left yesterday for Clinton Forge to accept a position with the Adams Express Company. Mr. Redwood is a son of John H. Redwood, Sr., who is a candidate for the office of Sheriff.

Remedies are Needed

Were we perfect, which we are not, medicines would not often be needed. But since our systems have been weakened, impaired and broken down through excesses, indulgences which have gone on from the early ages, through countless generations, remedies are needed to aid Nature in correcting our inherited and otherwise acquired weaknesses. To reach the seat of stomach weakness and consequent digestive troubles, there is nothing so good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a glyceric compound, extracted from native medicine, sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For final roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users. For final roots—sold for over forty years with great satisfaction to all users.
